Gone

*Emotions ran through my head
I found myself wishing I was dead
All because you were moving away
I knew I would never see you another day*

*You got into your car and waved goodbye
and then I was left all alone to cry
I felt helpless, and all alone
I could only talk to you on the phone*

*You were my neighbour, and my best friend
Why, Oh why did it have to end ?
You made me so happy, so carefree
You made it feel okay for me to be me*

*It's been almost a year since you moved away
but it feels like it was only yesterday
I remember everything you used to do
It may seem impossible, but it's true*

*You were the best friend I ever had
Now that you left me, I am beyond sad
I love and I miss you more than you ever knew
You've taught me so much, and I want to say thank you.*

Mother's Love

My mother had only one eye. I hated her .... She was such an embarrassment. She cooked for students and teachers to support the family. One day during elementary school when my mother came to say hello to me, I was so embarrassed. How could she do this to me ? I ignored her, threw her a hateful look and ran out. The next day at school one of my classmates said, 'EEEE, your mother has only one eye!' I wanted to bury myself. I also wanted my mother to just disappear .... I confronted her that day and said, 'If you're only going to make me a laughing stock, why don't you just die ?' She did not respond... I didn't even stop to think for a second about what I had said, because I was full of anger. I was oblivious to her feelings. I wanted to go out of that house, and have nothing to do with her. So I studied really hard and got a chance to go abroad to study.

Then, I got married. I bought a house of my own. I had kids of my own. I was happy with my life, my kids and the comforts. Then one day, my mother came to visit me. She hadn't seen me in years and she hadn't even met her grandchildren. When she stood by the door, my children laughed at her, and I yelled at her for coming over uninvited. I screamed at her, "How dare you come to my house and scare my children! GET OUT OF HERE! NOW!!!"

And to this, my mother quietly answered, 'Oh, I'm so sorry. I may have got the wrong address' and she disappeared out of sight. One day, a letter regarding a school reunion came to my house. I lied to my wife that I was going on a business trip and went for it. After the reunion, I went to the old shack just out of curiosity. My neighbours said that she had died. I did not shed a single tear. They handed me a letter that she had wanted me to have.

'My dearest son,

I think of you all the time. I'm sorry that I came to your house and scared your children. I was so glad when I heard you were coming for the reunion. But I may not be able to even get out of bed to see you. I'm sorry that I was a constant embarrassment to you when you were growing up. You see.... when you were very little, you met with an accident and lost your eye. As a mother, I couldn't stand watching you having to grow up with one eye. So I gave you mine. I was so proud of my son who was seeing a whole new world for me in my place with that eye.

With all my love to you,

Your mother.

PART D - WRITING (30 marks)

I. Informal letter

30, Mendis place,
Nikaweratiya,
23rd Nov. 2015.

My dear Kumari,

It is with great anguish that I'm writing this letter to you today. You will be surprised to hear what happened to us a few weeks ago.

It was mid night and the rain which started in the evening continued. All of a sudden we heard a loud crash and we all jumped out of bed. The cries became louder and we all went out in spite of the incessant rain. To our dismay we saw that a huge part of the hill beside the village had collapsed crushing ten to fifteen houses in the village. It was terrible! In the pouring rain everybody ran to save the lives of the victims. Soon the police was informed and several ambulances were brought. Most of the victims were removed to hospital while some were still under the debris. It was not possible to save their lives.

The whole village was in a state of misery. I'm sure you would have got the news over the media. We were provided with a lot of aid and assistance by the government and different other organizations since everything was at a stand still.

Shall conclude with regards to your parents.

Your loving friend,
Thushari,

Senior Asst. Secretary (University admissions),
University Grants Commission,
Colombo.

Dear Sir,

Requesting for a Transfer

I'm pleased to inform you that I have been selected to the University of Ruhuna for the academic year commencing from January 2016.

Sir, I wish to make this humble appeal to you to consider my request for a transfer to the Colombo university due to my present ill health.

I'm under treatment at the Kalubowila hospital for a rare heart disease. The doctors have recommended careful treatment for which I have to report to the clinic once a week. Since it would be difficult for me to travel a long distance every week, I humbly request you to consider my plight and help me to get a transfer to Colombo University in order to enable me to continue my studies. I would be ever so grateful to you for a favourable reply.

Thank you,
Yours faithfully,
D.H. Samarasinghe

PART C - COMPREHENSION (30 marks)

- I. Read the following text and do the activities that follow. (10 marks)

Do we know if the food we consume is free of germs which can cause over 200 diseases ranging from diarrhoea to cancer? Every year diarrhoea caused by contaminated food and water kills 2.2 million people, including 1.9 million children globally. Unsafe food kills an estimated 700,000 children in South-East Asia every year.

Food safety is critical for public health as food-borne diseases affect people's health and well-being. Unsafe food creates a vicious cycle of disease and malnutrition, particularly affecting infants, young children, the elderly and the sick. Food-borne diseases impede socio-economic development by straining health care systems and adversely impacting national economies, tourism and trade. Since food passes through multiple hands from the farm to reach our plates, ensuring food safety requires multi-sectoral collaboration. The approach needs to be preventive to improve food safety and requires multi-sectoral collaboration. The approach need to be preventive to improve food safety and quality through application of good farming practices by using agro chemicals or veterinary drugs only in the prescribed amount. Good storage, transportation, retail and restaurant practices are equally important to make food safe.

Street foods are emerging as an important source of food for a large proportion of the population in urban and peri-urban settings. Street food as a source of food-borne diseases, therefore, assumes public health significance.

Countries need to have a comprehensive food safety policy, legislation and national food safety programmes encompassing all the sectors and aspects for food safety. Enforcement of food safety policies in the region remains a challenge. Food quality and safety standards are usually strictly followed for exportable food commodities, but not always enforced for food destined for the domestic market. Food safety and quality should be ensured through stringent control and inspection mechanisms for export as well as the domestic market.

The proposal to increase the expenditure on education from 1.3% to 6% is certainly good for the country given that the World Bank South Asia recently reported that the poor quality of education is holding back South Asia. No doubt, Sri Lanka needs a well-educated workforce if we are to sustain long periods of growth. Therefore, the universities would need to turn out their graduates with the hard and the soft skills employers want. To do this, all our key institutions have an obligation to work together to ramp up the skills of our nation's talent pool and for that they need to engage with employers to understand the skills and competencies our employees need now and in the future.

Many reasons have been given by very eminent people both in the public and the private sector at various forums regarding the unemployment and underemployment situation among the educated youth. The most important hypothesis is the prevalence of a skills mismatch where the education system is not providing what the labour market needs. Another explanation given is that the public sector employment and wage policies in the country lead to a queuing behaviour among the population for the attractive jobs. A third hypothesis is the existence of stringent labour market regulations that prevents employment creation in the private sector. Even though we are aware of these challenges, graduate unemployment is still a huge problem in Sri Lanka.

Despite many genuine attempts being made to bring about a solution to the problem, the attempts have largely failed because the current education and the skills development infrastructure both in the public and the private sectors have still not been re-oriented fully to improve the quality of education in the country.

Therefore, unless we make those fundamental changes within our education system in the country, the system will not deliver the numbers and quality desired and we will continue to have forum after forum to find solutions for graduate unemployment. So in the short-term, the private sector and the university system need to identify the current and future skills requirements and re-orient the curriculum based on the needs of the private sector. Next, the State needs to work with the education / training providers to re-orient the infrastructure to deliver the skills that the country requires. Many surveys have revealed that in general, university graduates lack the basic skills sought by employers. Hence, the government, the university administrators, employers and graduates themselves must all endeavour to find a practical solution to fill this gap. Today, despite many interventions, we are still confronted with three key issues; (a) our universities do not generate the required skills for the country (b) our graduates lack knowledge about the reality of the labour market, and (c) many graduates prefer to join the public sector and be underemployed. Therefore, in order to create more productive jobs for the educated, the private-public links need to be strengthened and the higher education system needs to be re-oriented to refocus from supply to demand.

PART D - WRITING (20 marks)

- I. "Death penalty is very important to control the rate of crime". I totally agree with this statement when I think about the serious crimes that have occurred during the past few years. Day by day the rate of crimes increases since proper punishments are not given. The culprits escape since the law has loop holes.

When considering the punishments given to criminals in Muslim countries we should be ashamed that we just let go off these criminals and let them be among the society without any punishment. If we are to minimize crimes we have to teach them a good lesson. When one or two get the death penalty others would definitely avoid committing crimes. If not murders, abductions and causing adultery will continue even in the future.

- II. Education is not only referring to books and getting through examinations. A child should be moulded into a complete personality by the time he completes his education. Hence his character should be developed both intellectually and academically.

In some countries, school children and university students engage themselves in part time jobs. This is introduced to them in order to make them independent and self confident. While acquiring knowledge through books they begin to learn about the practical aspect of life. They meet different people, learn to shoulder a responsibility and also not to be too much of a burden to their parents. They also learn to feel the value of money and would understand how difficult it is to earn a living. Sometimes this immensely helps the low income families.

When considering the children of Sri Lanka I feel that it could be practised among A/L students if not for the tight competition to enter a university in our country. The students are confined to tuition classes soon after school and they have no thought for anything else. Sri Lankan students are very conscious about their studies. Unlike in other countries they have no chances to enter a university without obtaining a very high aggregate.

Another point I wish to highlight is that Sri Lankan parents do not believe in this culture. They are conventional and they think that children should be looked after and nurtured until they get married. It would be difficult to convince most parents with regard to the modern way of employing children in part time jobs.

Moreover parents are very particular about the safety of their children. Hence they do not like their children to be out of doors until late in the night. In a way according to the rate of crimes in our country I too have to change my idea about the suitability of children being employed in part time jobs.

Unlike in other countries everything is so difficult in Sri Lanka. Transportation, lack of facilities, safety at work places; all these affect the idea of sending students for part time jobs. Students in other countries need not attend tuition classes since all of them have the opportunity of continuing their studies even with average marks. Yet the students of our country are so unfortunate that they cannot gain admission to a university even if they are above average. When considering all these factors sending children for part time jobs is a futile attempt.
