The Fog

I saw the fog grow thick

Which soon made blind my ken;

It made tall men of boys,

And giants of all men.

It clutched my throat, I coughed;

Nothing was in my head

Except two heavy eyes

Like balls of burning lead.

And when it grew so black

That I could know no place

I lost all judgments then,

Of distance or of space.

The street lamps, and the lights

Upon the halted cars,

Could either be on earth

Or be the heavenly stars.

*A man passed by me close,
I asked my way, he said,
"Come, follow me, my friend"
I followed where he led.*

*He rapped the stones in front,
"Trust me," he said, "and come";
I followed like a child
A blind man led me home.*

(W. H. Davis)

(05 marks)

The World Health Organization has warned that immediate action is required to combat a tidal wave of cancer that will sweep the globe in the next 20 years. The number of new cancer cases worldwide in a single year will rise by 70 percent from 14.1 million in 2012 to 24 million in 2035. The future global burden of cancer will increasingly shift to poorer countries but half of all world cancers are now preventable with existing medical knowledge and expertise. Annual deaths from cancer will almost double in the same time period from 8.2 million to 14.6 million. Dr. Bernard Stewart from the University of New South Wales in Australia has said that modifications to human behaviour such as reducing alcohol consumption would play a crucial role in combating cancer.

Smoking is responsible for around 20 percent of all cancers globally and lung cancers are the most common form of cancer in the world, accounting for 13 per cent of all cases and 19 per cent of all cancer deaths. According to Dr. Wilde, the rise of cancer worldwide is a major obstacle to human development and well-being. These new figures and projections send a strong signal that immediate action is needed to confront this human disaster.

Henry Ford was the first person to build cars which were cheap, strong and fast. He was able to sell millions of models because he 'mass-produced' them; that is, he made great many cars of exactly the same type. Ford's father hoped that his son would become a farmer like him, but the young man did not like the idea and he went to Detroit where he worked as a mechanic. By the age of 29, in 1892, he had built his first car. However, the first 'mass-produced' car in the world, the famous 'Model T' did not appear until 1908-five years after Ford had started his great Motor Company. This car proved to be so popular that it remained unchanged for twenty years. Since Ford's time, mass-production methods have become common in industry and have reduced the price of many articles which would otherwise be very expensive.

□ PART C - COMPREHENSION (30 marks)

I. Read the following text and do the activities that follow. (10 marks)

Urban wetlands in the Western Province are one of the important eco-systems in our country but they are in danger of vanishing within our lifetime. Throughout generations, these wetlands have played a significant role in contributing eco-system services towards fisheries, agriculture, wildlife, nutrient retention, waste water treatment and flood-control. As the population and development pressures increased exponentially during the last few decades, the urban wetlands have been rapidly shrinking to a point that most of them such as the Bellanvila-Attidiya wetlands are just a tiny fraction of their former range. Being reduced to such a remnant and continued to be filled and destroyed for various reasons, these remaining wetlands may well disappear within our lifetime.

Many studies and publications have been done by scientists highlighting the importance of protecting these urban wetlands for the economic value provided through eco-services. It is unfortunate that such comprehensive studies and recommendations are not heeded by decision makers and relevant authorities. With just a third of Muthurajawela wetland officially protected by law, the rest of the wetland is filled and destroyed on a daily basis.

Therefore, it is the responsibility of the authorities to take immediate steps to declare the entire Muthurajawela wetland as a Protected Sanctuary. Subsequently, it is vital that Muthurajawela be listed as a "National Man and Biosphere Reserve (MAB) under the "UNESCO World Heritage Programme" to ensure long term sustainability for this vital eco-system.

The Sunday Times - 30.03.2014

- (1) Based on the information in the text, write True or False in the space provided beside each sentence.
- (a) The fishing industry is enhanced by the contribution of wetlands to the environment. (.....)
 - (b) The Bellanvila-Attidiya wetlands have been dwindling from its original state. (.....)
 - (c) Decision makers have implemented most of the recommendations proposed by studies to protect wetlands. (.....)
 - (d) Muthurajawela has been listed under "UNESCO World Heritage Programme" due to its vital eco-system. (.....)

- (2) Complete the following sentences using the information given in the text. Do not write more than two words in each blank.
- The remaining wetlands are disappearing due to being and destroyed for various reasons.
 - The urban wetlands have been rapidly shrinking due to and development pressures.
 - As an immediate step, it is vital that Muthurajawela be declared as a
- (3) Underline the most appropriate title to the above text.

II. Read the following text and do the activities that follow:

(20 marks)

An upsurge of new research suggests that animals have a much higher level of brainpower than previously thought. If animals do have intelligence, how do scientists measure it? Before defining animals' intelligence, scientists defined what is not intelligence. Instinct is not intelligence. It is a skill programmed into an animal's brain by its genetic heritage. Rote conditioning is also not intelligence. Tricks can be learned by repetition, but no real thinking is involved. Cueing, in which animals learn to do or not to do certain things by following outside signals, does not demonstrate intelligence. Scientists believe that insight, the ability to use tools, and communication using human language are all effective measures of the mental ability of animals.

When judging animal intelligence, scientists look for insight, which they define as a flash of sudden understanding. When a young gorilla could not reach fruit from a tree, she notices crates scattered about the lawn near the tree. She piled the creates into a pyramid, then climbed on them to reach her reward. The gorilla's insight allowed her to solve a new problem without trial and error.

The ability to use tools is also an important sign of intelligence. Crows use sticks to pry peanuts out of cracks. The crow exhibits intelligence by showing it has learned what a stick can do. Likewise, otters use rocks to crack open crab shells in order to get at the meat. In a series of complex moves, chimpanzees have been known to use sticks in order to get at a favourite snack termites. To make and use a termite tool, a chimp first selects just the right stalk or twig. He trims and shapes the stick, then finds the entrance to a termite mound. While inserting the stick carefully into the entrance, the chimpanzee turns it skillfully to fit the inner tunnels. The chimp attracts the insects by shaking the twig. Then it pulls the tool out without scraping off any termites. Finally, he uses his lips to skim the termites into his mouth.

Many animals have learned to communicate using human language. Some primates have learned hundreds of words in sign language. One chimp can recognize and correctly use more than 250 abstract symbols on a keyboard. These symbols represent human words. An amazing parrot can distinguish five objects of two different types. He can understand the difference between the number, colour, and kind of object. The ability to classify is a basic thinking skill. He seems to use language to express his needs and emotions.

The research on animal intelligence raises important questions. If animals are smarter than once thought, would that change the way humans interact with them? Would humans stop hunting them for sport or survival? Would animals still be used for food, clothing or medical experimentation? Finding answers to these tough questions makes a difficult puzzle even for a large-brained, problem-solving species like our own.

- (1) Write short answers to the following questions.

(a) How is instinct programmed into an animal's brain ?

(b) Write the three factors that scientists use to measure animal intelligence.

(c) Why do otters use rocks as a tool?

- (2) Underline the most appropriate response in each of the following.

- (a) The word upsurge in bold print, as it is used in the first paragraph of the passage, most nearly means

 - (i) an increasing large amount.
 - (ii) a decreasing amount.
 - (iii) a well-known amount.
 - (iv) an immeasurable amount.

- (b) Crows use sticks to pry peanuts out of cracks. Which of the following is demonstrated in this situation ?

 - (i) rote learning
 - (ii) use of tools
 - (iii) ability to communicate
 - (iv) instinct

- (3) State whether the given statements are True or False in the space provided.

- (a) Chimpanzees enjoy eating termites.
(b) Both instinct and insight are indicators of animal intelligence

- (4) Who or what do the pronouns in bold print in the text refer to ?

- (a) It (paragraph 1)
(b) they (paragraph 2)
(c) them (paragraph 5)

- (5) Write one word for each blank selecting from the passage, which means the same as the given words/ phrases.

- (a) doing things over and over again
 - (b) thrown in different directions
 - (c) mass of piled up earth
 - (d) recognize the difference
 - (e) state of being alive despite danger

(6) Fill in the blanks in the following passage, based on the information in the above text.
Do not use more than two words in each blank.

The latest studies have shown that (1) of animals is higher than what scientists previously thought. According to these studies, instinct, rote learning, tricks and (2) do not demonstrate animal intelligence. However, (3) which is a flash of sudden understanding is believed to be an example of the mental ability of animals. The use of (4) to get things done by animals is also a gauge of their mental ability. Expressing ideas using language specific to (5) is another example of the measurement of their intelligence.

Dear Maneesha,

Sorry, I could not write to you since you left. How's life in Australia ? When are you hoping to get back ? We miss you quite a lot.

We have been really busy with the opening ceremony of our new auditorium at school. It was held last week and the chief guest was his excellency the president. This event was really exciting and colourful. The hall was beautifully decorated and it looked very grand.

There was a beautiful variety show in which many of us took part. We had to practise our items during the past few weeks. All the teachers were highly engaged in the organization of this event. We missed our class work at times. So I'm trying to cover the work that we missed by devoting much of my time on studies now.

Hope to see you back soon. Please try to join us as soon as your father finishes his work there. Convey my regards to all.

Your loving friend,
Nimali.

I. Effective leadership requires specific qualities that one should develop. He or she should possess leadership qualities, such as good understanding, correct approach according to circumstances, kind but firm and respect to others.

A good leader will never over estimate himself or be proud of his position. He will handle all situations tactfully and humanely. He will always respect others' views and appreciate the services or the performances of his followers. To be a good leader you need to possess the above mentioned qualities more than educational qualifications. (77 words)

Is Co-Education suitable or not.

Education is a vital requirement in a developing society. In the early days there were no schools, people learnt everything through their life's experiences. During the days of the ancient kings teachers were brought to their houses by Royal families to teach their children to read and write.

As time passed there came a more organized system of imparting knowledge by teachers. The children gathered in one place which was called a school and lessons were taught. Children of both genders learnt in harmony. They began to understand each other and they were taught to respect each other, maintaining a high sense of discipline.

Hence co-education is nothing new to this world. It has been there even in the very ancient times. This system is highly accepted and very common in European countries. But when you go to the Middle East it is quite different. Since the middle Eastern countries have a different culture boys and girls do not learn in the same school. They are in separate schools. In Sri Lanka, we have both systems. Most of the rural schools and some of the urban schools are mixed schools. The International schools too remain the same. At the same time the national schools and some of the private schools are single sex schools.

When considering the difference between mixed schools and single sex schools one cannot deny the fact that there is a difference in the mentality of students. Students studying in mixed schools are very bold and challenging since they have no fear of the other sex. When they associate closely they overcome the fear or misunderstanding that they have towards the other gender. They become more understanding and even in future they will know how to work with them in unison.

On the other hand students who study in single sex schools will find it difficult to adjust themselves to the society when they become adults. They will not be aware of the behavioural pattern or the whims and fancies of the other gender. It'll take some time for them to fit into the society since they are not familiar with the other gender. Yet the students who study in single sex schools will be more refined and accomplished.

In my opinion I would prefer to study in a single sex school during my childhood. A mixed education would be more suitable for university students. When children are young, they should not concentrate on the interests of the opposite sex. Education would be more successful if they concentrate only on their studies and other activities in school. When young children are put together unwanted relationships could build up. That will lead to a negligence of their studies. Hence my choice is a single sex education.
